Wales v England – half time writing exercise

With a bit of luck your teachers will let you watch the England v Wales match today at school. (It kicks off at 2 pm and is on BBC1, in case you need to know.)

To repay your kind teacher’s kindness, in letting you watch it, we think it’d be a good idea to do a speedy writing exercise at half time. A diary entry.

So, the minute the half time whistle goes you’ve got 15 minutes to write your thoughts on the game. These questions might help you.

How do you feel? Why?
What’s your highlight so far?
What are you fears about the second half?
Are you bored?
What’s it like in your school? Are people excited? Describe them.
What is the person next to you doing during the game?
How much do you care?

We want you to fill one side of paper with a fast diary entry. Even if you are not into the game or football, write your thoughts.

Then when the second half starts you have to stop.

That’s it.

You could read it when you get home. Or even write a bit more after the final whistle. But that’s up to you.
